Injuries caused by lithium-ion batteries have quadrupled in a decade

66% of parents have never heard of dangers

Most common injuries come from swallowing batteries from remote controls

Symptoms start off similar to common cold

Can cause severe injuries or even death

By Rob Waugh

PUBLISHED: 07:19 EST, 14 May 2012 | UPDATED: 08:36 EST, 14 May 2012

An increasing number of children are being hospitalised after eating lithium-ion batteries - tiny, coin-sized batteries which can stick in the oesophagus and are highly toxic.

'It was frustrating because we couldn’t figure what was wrong with him,' said Sonia Khan, whose child Umar had to be fed through a tube for three months after eating one of the batteries.

In some cases, eating lithium batteries can be fatal - and cases have quadrupled in the past decade.

'It was frustrating because we couldn’t figure what was wrong with him,' said Sonia Khan, whose child Umar had to be fed through a tube for three months after eating one of the batteries.
Initially, symptoms seem more like a cold, but the poisons inside the batteries can burn a hole inside children's oesophaguses, leading to severe illness or death.

In a recent study by Energizer and Safe Kids USA, 66% of parents indicated they have not read, seen or heard anything about the risks of coin-sized button batteries.

'It was tough on him,' Khan said in an interview with ABC news. 'He didn't understand why he couldn't eat. We all had to hide from food from him.'

The tiny batteries - often found in hi-tech remote controls, toys and greetings cards - are dangerous because they are less well shielded than batteries such as AA or AAA batteries.

They are also more easily swallowed.

'The threat is invisible, as these batteries are often inside compartments within electronic devices,' says a spokesperson for Battery Controlled, a charity which deals with the dangers of lithium batteries.

'However, because many of these devices are not children's toys, the battery compartments are easy to open. Small children often have easy access to these devices and enjoy playing with them, and many parents do not know there is a risk.'

The number of cases where children have been seriously hurt or have died has more than quadrupled in the past five years (2006-2010) compared to the five years prior (2001-2005).

In 2010 alone, there were more than 3,400 swallowing cases reported in the U.S., according to Dr. Toby Litovitz, of the National Capital Poison Centre who is an advisor to this effort.

Most often, the batteries children swallow have come out of remote control devices. Often, the first symptoms are indistinguishable from a...
Emmett Rauch, two, swallowed a lithium battery from a remote control and has since had 18 surgeries in the past year at Phoenix Children's Hospital in Arizona.

His mother Karla Rauch said no one saw Emmett swallow the battery and the first symptoms he had were similar to a cold.

She said: 'Batteries start burning in the oesophagus within two hours and it was in him we think about three days.'

The toddler has had four inches of his oesophagus removed after the acid from the battery burned two holes through it.

He has also suffered multiple cases of collapsed lung and had close to 200 X-rays. He has spent more than 19 weeks of his young life in the pediatric ICU.

The batteries are so dangerous because they don't have as much casing as an AA battery.

A nurse who cares for Emmett, Michelle Chacon, said she has seen several cases of children swallowing batteries and that more should be done to make families aware of the household danger.

The nurse has helped the Rauch family set up a charity to raise awareness about the tiny batteries which are used in everyday objects like clocks, cameras and calculators.

Ms Chacon said: 'You talk about childproofing your home and covering your outlets, and this needs to be a part of that.'

According to the National Capital Poison Center, each year in the U.S. more than 3,500 people swallow miniature disc or button batteries.

The charity called Emmett's Fight aims to inform about the dangers of button battery ingestion.

The symptoms are similar to the common cold or the flu - fever, lack of appetite, coughing and increase of mucus production.
Survival: Emmett Rauch was close to death after ingesting a battery at his home and has suffered multiple health problems ever since.

Hooked up: Emmett Rauch swallowed the lithium battery from a TV remote control at his home in Arizona.
Constant worry: The boy's mother Karla Rauch said at first his symptoms appeared like a common cold.

Read more:
- Swallowed Batteries: ABC News

MOST READ NEWS
- First Gay President': Newsweek marks Obama's landmark...
- The most dangerous drug in the world: 'Devil's Breath'...
- Why man's best friend is also his worst photobomber...
- Just the ticket for popping the question: The tree-lined...
- Nights in pink satin: The awkward prom photos you'd really...
The deadly poison hidden in EVERY home that can burn holes in children... http://www.dailymail.co.uk/sciencetech/article-2144166/The-deadly-poi...
Haha. And psychiatrists prescribe this stuff and the FDA wants to add it to our drinking water.

- Dude, Austin USA, 14/5/2012 17:13

Click to rate . . . Rating (0)

I was taught in the forties not to put things in my mouth - I quick learned even though I cried because my hand hurt.

- Pete, Lincs, 14/5/2012 14:09

Click to rate . . . Rating 10
The deadly poison hidden in EVERY home that can burn holes in children... http://www.dailymail.co.uk/sciencetech/article-2144166/The-deadly-poison-hidden-EVERY-home-burn-holes-childrens-throats.html

GADGET REVIEWS

Nike's brand new FuelBand
"If you have a body, you are an athlete"; it's the principle upon which Nike was founded. This product more than most encapsulates that.

Scosche myTrek Wireless Pulse Monitor
Monitors your pulse and sends real-time data via wireless to its app on your iPhone and iPod Touch

Braun Oral-B Triumph 5000 Electric Toothbrush
The toothbrush with a wireless SmartGuide that tells you how well you've cleaned your teeth.

'Play' Multi-Message Video Pad
It's mooted as the 'ultimate video memo'. And some say it will sound the death knell for post-it notes. Above all, it's fun to use.

Angry Birds iPod & iPhone Speaker Dock
For fans of the 350-million selling game, this is possibly the most exciting speaker system to ever be invented.

Top Anti Aging Skin Care
2012's best reviewed anti-aging skin care products.

Top Rated Mutual Funds
1. Find Top Performing Mutual Funds. 2. Invest and Become Wealthy Today

Buy Stocks for $4
No Account or Investment Minimums. ING DIRECT Investing - $50 Bonus.

Mortgage Rates Hit 2.50%
If you owe under $729k you may qualify for 3.01% APR Govt Refi Plans.

Find this story at www.dailymail.co.uk/sciencetech/article-2144166/The-deadly-poison-hidden-EVERY-home-burn-holes-childrens-throats.html

Published by Associated Newspapers Ltd
The deadly poison hidden in EVERY home that can burn holes in children... http://www.dailymail.co.uk/sciencetech/article-2144166/The-deadly-poi...